JOIN BCPL IN CELEBRATING THE EVERDAY HEROES OF OUR COMMUNITY

Heroes don't always wear capes! Sometimes, the greatest heroes are the everyday people who work to help others and improve their communities. Obviously, this includes first responders like police officers and firefighters, but local volunteers and people who look out for their neighbors are also heroes in their own right.

In honor of those individuals and anyone who wants to discover ways they can give back too, Bullitt County Public Library is hosting its first ever Community Heroes Festival on Saturday, March 23rd. The festival will showcase local charities, organizations, and people who give back to their community in amazing ways. Learn about volunteer activities at Bullitt County Animal Shelter, hear stories from a veteran and local police officer, and paint hive boxes with Bee Is for Bullitt County that will be used as functional public art. Plus, befriend adoptable bunnies with the Bun Bun Brigade and meet a therapy dog from the animal shelter.

"Bullitt County is full of everyday heroes who consistently give of themselves, inspire others, and make the community the special place that it is," said BCPL Assistant Director Jennifer Nippert. "This event is designed to focus on heroes connected to the Lebanon Junction area, but we want to encourage visitors to thank all of the everyday heroes in their lives. Stop by to see me at the festival to create a thank you card for your everyday hero, whoever they may be!"

To foster increased community collaboration and to provide more space for the event, the Community Heroes Festival will be hosted at Lebanon Junction Elementary, located at 10920 Preston Highway. Members of the public are encouraged to drop in to enjoy meeting local heroes and to learn about volunteer opportunities between 10:00 AM and 2:00 PM.
